

CENSORSHIP AGITATION IS AIDING INDUSTRY

President of Mutual Points
That Present Day Feeling on Question Is Proving An Aid.

By JOHN R. FREULER,
President of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Way out west in the early days there was a famous old editor, Col. Dan Anthony, a member of the now extinct school of brimstone journalists. Colonel Anthony, if his chroniclers tell any part of the truth, was a considerable success. His formula of conduct for all who dealt with the public of that day was expressed in a few words of advice given to a young politician one day:

"My son, give 'em hell. Make 'em like you if you can. Make 'em hate you if you can't. Make 'em talk about you. Cussing is just as good advertising as praise, and it's always more earnest. Make 'em talk about you."

That is what is happening to the motion picture these days in all this interesting even if pestiferous agitation for censorship.

A whole lot of people who never paid any attention to the pictures are being forced to think and talk about them. Out of it all the motion picture will gain new patrons, new friends, a new market. The motion picture will feel a new influence of interest and gain a closer sympathy with the whole people.

There is growing evidence that a very large number of the thinking men and women of the country are now for the first time really paying heed to the censorship problem. There is also pretty good evidence that they are at this stage rather sharply divided in opinion, which is a healthy state of affairs for a problem in this state of evolution.

That the movement for censorship was originally raised by "long hairs" and cranks and job hunters is hardly to be questioned, particularly from the inside point of view. That it is now being considered and discussed by a very large number of honest and sincere people is equally certain. From these latter persons the motion picture has nothing to fear. In fact, it is their consideration which shall mean our ultimate final delivery from the persecution of the "reformers."

The more the problem of censorship is discussed with the public the safer will be our rights as a specialized phase of the free press.

Full publicity and ventilation of the issue will destroy the power of those who now seek to become parasites upon the industry.

When a women's club or a church society, or a drama league or a sewing circle or a debating society takes up the censorship problem now it simply presents to us opportunity.

The time for effort for suppression of the issue is past. Now is the time to feed it with fuel and burn out the fanatics.

THIS CLOCK WAS NOT SET AHEAD

These new regulations in Germany by which the clocks have been set forward one hour as an economical measure in the matter of illumination has proved somewhat puzzling, especially to inhabitants in the rural districts. The Frankfurter Zeitung relates an amusing incident which occurred in connection therewith in Bavaria. Rasmus Rasmussen, a farmer, who was always punctual in complying with all laws and regulations, was somewhat bewildered by this new order and sought counsel in regard thereto from the district official.

"Well Rasmussen, what is troubling you now?" said the official to the farmer, who stood before him nervously fidgeting his cap.

"It's about the clocks," said Rasmussen. "I wanted to ask if it is true that we must set the clocks forward an hour."

"Of course," replied the official, and the order embraces every clock in the German empire."

Rasmussen appeared dumfounded and wiped his perspiring brow.

"But that's an awful problem for me," said the farmer. "You see, I have a very old clock which has been in the family since my grandfather's time, and I wanted to ask your honor if I could not leave it just as it always was."

"You cannot," said the official bluntly. "No clock is exempt."

"Well, of course, as you say, but I don't know how I'm going to do it."

"Why, don't be silly. You simply push the hour hand forward one hour. Now go home and don't forget about it."

"What's a hason got to do with it?"

"Well, you see, the clock is in my garden and is imbedded in a cement column. It has no hands; it is what you call a sun clock or sun dial, and—"

But the official waved him away and refused to listen to him any further.—New York Herald.

THE SILVER LINING.
(By Walt Mason.)

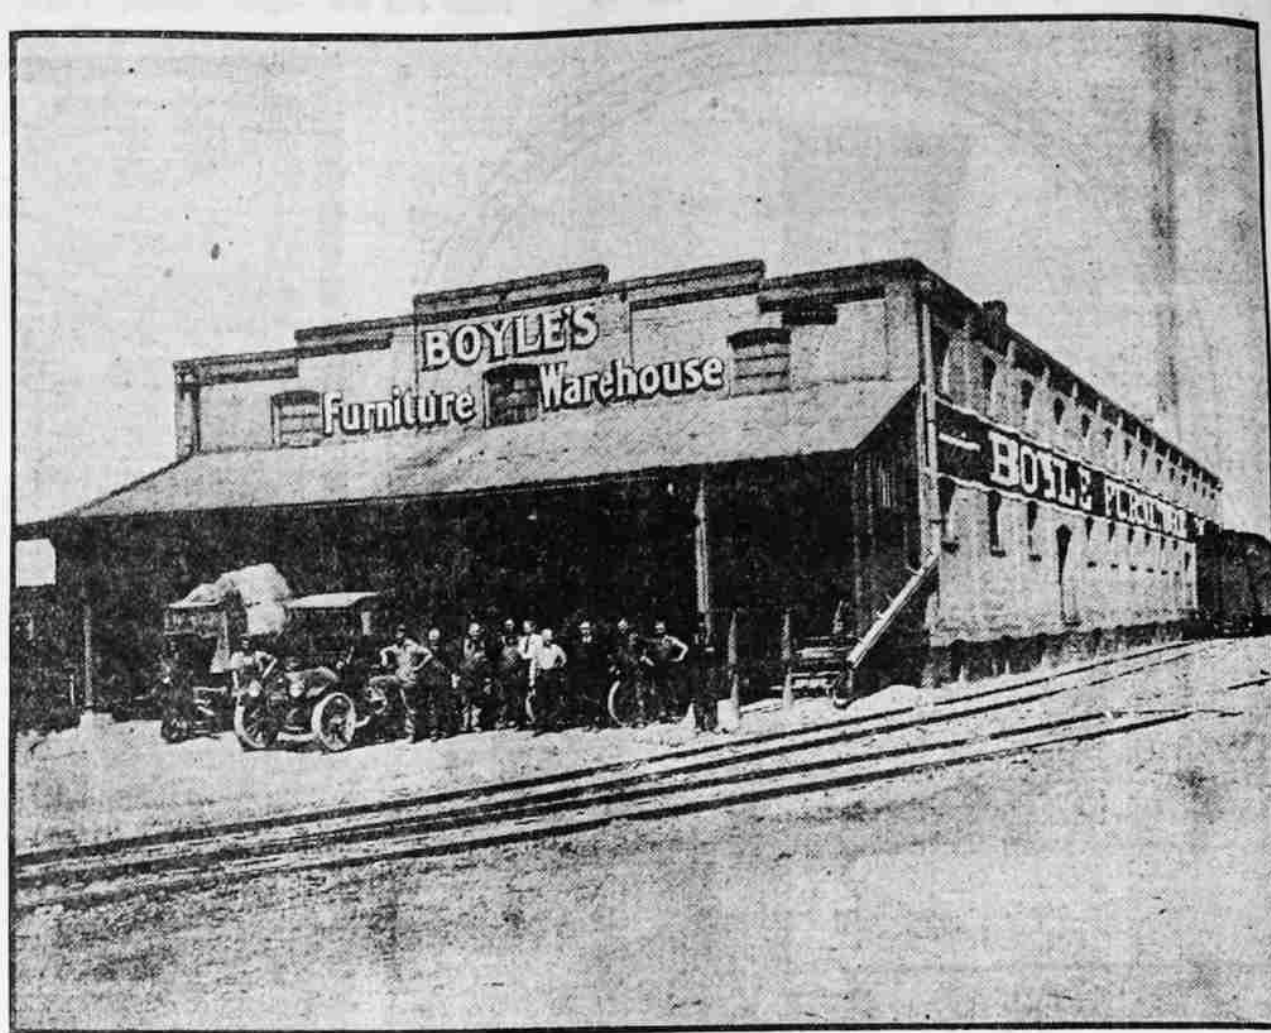

To one who's constituted right, some solace always is in sight, whatever troubles life may bring, he'll find excuse to smile and sing. Jim Wilkins had a patch of beans and artichokes and other greens, the finest in the countryside; in it he took an honest pride. One night St. Penny's packer's cow, which has a low, retreating brow, went bulging into Wilkins' yard, when no night watchman was on guard. At dawn, when Jimmie awoke, and through the window pushed his nose, to gaze upon his garden sassa, he found but ruin there, alas! I thought to hear him rant and swear, and see him paw and tear his hair, but he surveyed with manful grin, the wreckage that the place was in. "How thankful I should be," said he; "she didn't eat my cherry tree! She spared the cloverline and the pump; why should I have a doleful bump? I'm thankful, too, 'twas but a cow; if it had been a warthog, now, or if some

Warehouse Boyle Furniture Co.
Capacity 75 cars.

AS a modern business institution, the Boyle Furniture company is an excellent measure of the rapid advancement of Ogden's commercial interests. And it also marks the progress and development of the furniture manufacturing business which has been revolutionized in the United States, being a big factor in the comfort and conveniences of the modern home of today.

Back in 1853 Peter Boyle, a Scotch cabinet maker, left Glasgow and cast his lot among the Pioneers of Utah. In 1856 he opened a little shop in Ogden, where he began turning out furniture by hand. The work of this earnest artisan soon became known to the settlers and he was kept busy. Mr. Boyle did not do a strictly cash business in those days. In fact other commodities besides money were considered legal tender and much of the products of his shop were traded for flour, meat and other necessities of life. That the people who traded with him got value received is shown by the fact that in many of the older homes of Ogden and Weber county, may still be found pieces of furniture prized as the work of Peter Boyle. The Boyle Furniture company has many customers today who boast that they traded with the founder of the firm more than half a century ago.

Energy, industry and fair dealing brought him success and the demand for his goods increased, making necessary the enlargement of his shop. When his son, John A. Boyle, was a young man, he became associated with his father and the firm was then known as Boyle & Co. The growing concern took another step forward and in 1890 it was incorporated as The Boyle Furniture Co. A. McLaren Boyle was made manager and remained with the firm in that capacity until his death in 1903. It was at that time James H. Douglas, the present efficient manager, took charge. In 1906 the business was moved from the building now occupied by the Ogden Furniture & Carpet Co. to its present quarters which was purchased from W. H. Wright & Sons Co.

From a one-man shop, it has grown until now 60 people are regularly employed. The main store, or retail department, is a building of four floors, 66x230 feet, with every modern convenience to facilitate the handling of a big trade. A warehouse of three floors, 70x200 feet, is kept busy supplying the wholesale trade. This warehouse is located on the Oregon Short Line and Denver & Rio Grande railroad tracks in the center of Ogden's wholesale district. An average of 115 carloads of furniture are handled each year and the firm's trade territory includes, Utah, Southern Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada. The retail store is modern throughout. The latest modes of passenger and freight elevators have been installed, while a private telephone exchange connects all departments.

The best of service at a fair price has made The Boyle Furniture company a strong institution. Its patronage is sought by the large eastern manufacturers and its credit rating is gilt edged.

Harold J. Peery is president of the company. W. W. Boyle, vice-president, is one of the oldest and most experienced furniture men in the state, if not in the west.

To James H. Douglas, who has been manager for the past 12 years, is due much credit for the progress made and the excellent standing of the firm in the business world. With these older men are associated many young men who are taking an active interest in the business and The Boyle Furniture company promises to keep pace with the growth of the intermountain country for many generations to come. It is a concrete example of what the pluck and perseverance of one man can accomplish when he sees his opportunity and makes the most of it. This monument to Peter Boyle's small beginning is also a tribute to the spirit that has made Ogden the trade center of a wide and prosperous territory.

big rhinoceros had come and put this stunt across, there'd not be any land-scape here, so watch me smile from ear to ear." I put him in a padded cell, where he is doing very well.—Copyright, 1916.
